The Rooted in Relationships Pyramid Model Implementation Package is grounded in research about what strategies and supports are necessary for new knowledge, skills, and practices to be sustained over time. The Pyramid Model provides a framework for supporting children's social emotional development in a way that improves child outcomes. However, sustained improvement in child outcomes is largely dependent on the extent to which the elements of evidence based implementation identified below are carried out. These elements outline the way each evidence based practice is translated into real world success. According to the literature, the core components of implementation are:

- Building and using implementation teams to lead the effort (community stakeholders and provider leadership teams);
- Using ongoing data collection to drive continuous improvement, both fidelity to practice and indicators of progress (Teaching Pyramid Observation Tool-TPOT, The Pyramid Infant Toddler Observation Scale-TIPITOS, Benchmarks of Quality-BOQ, ongoing provider action plans developed through coaching); and
- Developing a sustainable implementation infrastructure to build capacity (training modules, on the job coaching, and reflective consultation for coaching).
